Oliver No. 5

Fast Pace Ever

Typewriter Selling.

The wonderful new model, Oliver No. 5, has taken the market by storm. Its reception by the public has exceeded in enthusiasm anything we anticipated. It is a stenographer's ally, and is welcomed as the one machine that answers the multiplied need of the hour.

The cry is, for Speed! Speed! Speed!—and the Oliver responds. The demand for Durability is filled by the sturdy, steel-clad Oliver. To a call for a writing machine that will do many things and do each of them equally well, the Oliver answers with its unexampled versatility.

—Its visible writing saves the strain on eye and brain.
—Its legibility lends beauty to its work. The letters that bear the Oliver imprint are the letters that seem to speak.

Oliver No. 5 fairly bristles with new and exclusive time-saving features. We have space to mention only a few of the more important ones.

—Disappearing Indicator shows exact printing point.
—Balance Shifting Mechanism saves operative effort.
—Line Ruling Device is fine for tabulated work.
—Double Release doubles convenience.

—Non-Vibrating Base insures stability. Yet with all of those added improvements, we have still further simplified the Oliver by fueling brains with metal.

Oliver No. 5 is a dream come true—the dream of Thomas Oliver crystallized into this wonderful mechanism of shining steel that embodies every possible requirement of a perfect writing machine.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible, but I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chapter in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, I can cure all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

When Talleyrand Secured. When Mme. de Staël published her celebrated novel, "Delphine," she was supposed to have painted herself in the person of the heroine, and M. Talleyrand in that of an elderly lady, who is one of the principal characters. "They tell me," said he, the first time he met her, "that we are both of us in your novel, in the disguise of women."

For cuts, sprains, bruises, burns, rheumatic and all other pains, use McLean's Volcanic Oil Lotion. First sold in 1852, still the same effective remedy in 1908. Good for men or beast. 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

Prosperity and Adversity. If we do not suffer ourselves to be transported by prosperity, neither shall we be reduced by adversity. Our souls will be proof against the dangers of both these states; and, having explored our strength, we shall be sure of it; for, in the midst of felicity, we shall have tried how we can bear misfortune.—Lord Bolingbroke.

Marriage Age is Increased. It is generally admitted that the marriageable age of women has advanced considerably of recent years. Many a bride has long felt girlhood behind her before she exchanges her vows at the altar, and there seem to be few young men nowadays who care to assume the responsibilities of married life until they are in the financial position usually associated with middle age.

All the World is a stage, and Ballard's Snow Liniment plays a most prominent part. It has no superior for Rheumatism, stiff joints, cuts, sprains, and all pains. Buy it, try it, and you will always use Ballard's Snow Liniment as a living proof of what it does. Buy a trial bottle. 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

Electrical Air Filters. Electric air filtration is the idea of an English engineer, and is based on the discovery that a body positively electrified by 100 volts or more will become covered with soot in a single day in a smoky atmosphere, while a negatively charged body remains clean. Inserting a sheet of wire gauze in the intake line of a ventilating system and electrifying it by connecting to a 250-volt supply main, the gauze extracts a large quantity of soot from the air.

Chronic Constipation Cured. One who suffers from chronic constipation is in danger of many serious. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup cures chronic constipation as it aids digestion and stimulates the liver and bowels, restoring the natural action of these organs. Commence taking it today and you will feel better at once. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or grip and is very pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes.

fooling with Idioms. A foreigner, meeting an American friend, said to him, "How are you?" The latter replied, "Out of sight." The man considered this very clever, and decided to use the expression on the next occasion. Shortly after he was met by a friend, who asked, "How are you?" With visible pride he answered, "You don't see me."

Inchcape Rock. Inchcape rock is east of the Isle of May, 12 miles from all land, in the German sea. This is the rock that figures in the story of Ralph the Rover, who is supposed to have cut the bell from the buoy in a mischievous spirit and later been wrecked on the rock as a result of his own work.

Agonies Of Pain

Never give up, and think that all women, yourself included, have to suffer pain.

Thousands of women have written to tell how they have cured their womanly ills, and relieved their pains; and over a million have been benefited, in various other forms of female disease, during the past 50 years, by that popular and successful female remedy

WINE OF CARDUI WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I believe I would now have been dead," writes Mrs. Minnie Lamb, of Lebanon Junction, Ky. "If it hadn't been for Cardui, I had suffered with bad cramping spells, pains in my back, sides and arms, and awful bearing-down pains. Now these pains have all gone, as a result of using Cardui."

"A FALSE PROPHET"

By E. M. Smith.

"You really ought to go to Madam Zera," Josie informed me. "She would astonish you."

Josie and I had been having tea together one wet September afternoon; I had called at the Marshalls' flat for the ostensible purpose of borrowing a book from Josie's brother. I was fortunate enough to learn that he was out.

"But there is something in palmistry," she continued. "You don't know how wonderfully correct Madam Zera was in reading my character. She said I was very sweet-tempered, as a rule, though sometimes I get in awful rages."

"She said that—that I had an admirer—two, in fact, but one I must certainly avoid; he was not my affinity and would bring me great unhappiness if I married him."

"This is all most interesting," I observed, and switched on my most sympathetic expression.

"She described him accurately. He is a tall, fair man, with cold, gray eyes—at least, I know several men like him," Josie went on rather incoherently, watching the effect of this speech.

"I am tall, fair, with gray eyes," I said shortly to meet a dark man." Josie said, in impressive tones. "I shall be wise to marry him, madam thinks. He will make an admirable husband, and she feels sure I will be happy. Oh! and she said, too, that I had a sweet, ethereal nature, and that I was very idealistic—but, of course, that wasn't true."

"You should go to a crystal-gazer," I remarked. "Palmists are not in it with psychometrists."

"Really? Do you know a good, reliable one? I've never been to a gazer," cried Josie, in great excitement.

"I do a little in that way myself," I said, "although I don't want it mentioned. You see, I am Scotch, and many Scotch people have second sight. That is why I scoff at palmistry; crystal-gazing is a much more advanced science," I asserted confidently.

"Oh! Would you gaze for me?" she implored. "I haven't a crystal, but Arthur has a glass paper-weight." And she rushed away to get it.

I assumed the correct dreamy, prophetic expression.

"It is necessary," I said, "to hold one of the patient's—I mean subject's—hands. I hold the crystal in the other."

She slipped a soft, warm little hand into mine. Crystal-gazing is a distinctly pleasant pastime under some conditions.

After staring fixedly at the glass ball for some moments, I began to speak in a deep, sepulchral voice, so weird that it surprised me.

I told Josie several facts about her past life—I had learned them from Arthur—and she was evidently much impressed. Then I grew more imaginative.

"You will meet a dark man," I informed her.

"That's what madam said," she replied, drawing a little closer.

"She was quite correct then. The dark man's appearance is not prepossessing, but he is a worthy, kind man."

"Worthy? is a horrid adjective," she protested, with a little shudder.

"I see him quite plainly in the crystal—he squints a little, and he is rather fat. I notice that he is becoming bald, and he wears a bristly black beard."

Josie likes clean-shaven men.

"Shall I marry him?" she questioned, anxiously.

"Yes, I am quite sure you will; he is fairly well off, he has made his money in the grocery line, I think. You will probably be quite happy, and I should strongly advise you to marry him. He seems a little uninteresting, but I feel he is a very estimable person, and my intuition is never wrong. That is all I can tell you," I said, with a deep sigh of exhaustion, putting the crystal down.

"But what about the fair man?" Josie asked, withdrawing her hand.

"Oh, he isn't in your life at all. He goes out when the bald and bearded person appears."

She looked slightly downcast.

"But I shan't marry the dark man unless I like him."

"Oh, of course you will like him when you meet him, and what do looks matter? His phlegmatic and—stodgy temperament will steady your ethereal, idealistic nature."

"Suppose I married before I met him?"

"Now I come to think of it, it would be rather a good way of averting destiny. If you really feel you would rather not have him, but I think you had better wait and see him first."

"No! No! No! I couldn't marry a person of that description. It must be he whom madam meant, although she wasn't half as clever as you are. She didn't go into details as you do. Oh, what shall I do? I shall dread to go out for fear of meeting the creature!"

"If you were to marry some one else quite soon it might solve the difficulty," I whispered, retaining possession of her hand. "Unless you committed bigamy you couldn't marry the bearded fellow then, you know."

"But who on earth can I marry at once?" she asked plaintively, her blue eyes filling with tears.

"Well, if I may offer a suggestion—how would I do?"

Josie had accepted the suggestion.
